

A STUDY ON MILLENNIUM DEVELOPMENT GOAL AND SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOAL: LESSON FROM BANGLADESH

MUHAMMAD SHAH ALAM
University of Rajshahi, Bangladesh

ABSTRACT

This paper aims at presenting the Millennium Development Goal (MDG) and Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) for inclusive growth of the world in general and Bangladesh in particular. With the passes of time, the world economy and economic systems have been changing rapidly to reach the development facilities to the deprived people living in the world. For this, the United Nations along with world leaders, has undertaken Millennium Development Goals to reduce the extreme economic hardship of the deprived people living in the world. Based upon MDG, the Government of the People Republic of Bangladesh has undertaken Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) for reducing extreme poverty of the people living in Bangladesh. The study is mainly based on secondary information. Data have been collected from different publications from the United Nations, different websites and institutional publications. During analysis of the collected data, it is seen that the steps undertaken by the Government of Bangladesh to reduce the extreme poverty has become effective and the economic development of Bangladesh has been moving towards sustainable as because the deprived section of people has started improving their lives and to some extent starts entering into development opportunities available in Bangladesh.

Keywords: Millennium Development; Sustainable Development, Equality of Opportunity, Inclusive Economic Growth, Deprived People, The United Nations